LONDON.

WHITEHALL, January 6.

LETTERS from Fort St. George, in the East Indies, dated July 5, 1752, have brought advice, that the president and council of Fort St. George having received information some time ago that the Chunda Saib and his allies, were endeavouring to harrass us in our own districts, sent for a reinforcement from Bengal, and also sent Capt. Clive to Madras, who having collected our forces, and taken the field, found the enemy strongly encamped at Vendaloor, a place about fifteen miles distant from hence. The enemy decamp'd in the night, and took the rout of Arcot, and were pursued by the Nabob's forces; they gain'd Conversepante, about sixty miles off, which place was appointed for their rendezvous, their intention having been to surprize Arcot. Here an engagement ensued, in which most of their European forces were killed, and taken prisoners, and their cannon and baggage were also taken. Upon this advice Capt. Clive was immediately ordered to march; he took St. David in his way, and whilst he was there, the Ship Dorrington arrived with Major Lawrence, who at his own request, had the command of the forces given to him; and he set out on the 17th of March from Fort St. David, at the head of a party of 400 Europeans and 1000 Seepoys, and took under convoy a large quantity of stores and ammunition for Trichinapoly, and proceeded, without molestation, till he came with his forces near Coliaddy on the 28th, when the enemy strove to take advantage of his situation, a strong detachment of French from Chunda Saib's army having thrown up an intrenchment in the way he was to march, cannonaded him from it, and endeavoured to intercept his passage, which induced Major Lawrence, on the Nabob's part, to return it, and occasion'd the loss of some men on both sides; but, the enemy not advancing, he went on the next day for Trichinapoly, about fifteen miles distant, and as the road was in sight of the enemy's camp, they came out with their whole force to oppose him. Major Lawrence, in order to secure the baggage, marched to meet them, this brought on a cannonading from them, which did him but little damage; but his guns galled the enemy very much, and forced them to retreat into a hollow way; upon this Major Lawrence drew off his men, and join'd the army that night. In this action the enemy lost above 300 horse, besides Allum Cawn, a man of great interest in the country. Chunda was soon obliged to raise the siege of Trichinapoly, and collect his forces in Syringham, a neighbouring island; and the English forces having possess'd themselves of all the strong posts quite round it, they so effectually prevented provisions from coming to the enemy, that Chunda's great army of 3000 men was dispersed in less than two months; and himself, with the French, and a few black horse and Seepoys, who held out, were in a miserable condition for want of sustenance.

Upon this the Nabob summoned them to surrender Prisoners; and after they had sent Chunda, in the night time to Manacjee, they delivered up the island of Syringham on the 3d of June, on condition that the French officers should have leave to go to Pondicherry on their parole, never to serve against the Nabob or his allies; and the soldiers to be sent to Europe by the first Opportunity, but in the mean time to be kept prisoners. As the allies could not agree who should keep Chunda, who was taken at Manacjee by the Tanjore Ally, to end the disputes his head was struck off.

The whole business was done in a few sieges and some skirmishes, in several of which not a man of our forces was lost, so that in reducing the blacks to the Nabob's obedience, and making 30 officers, and near 1000 European soldiers prisoners, we had no 50 men killed.

M. Dupleix, at the desire of Salabad Jung has sollicited for a peace, which the Nabob is willing to content to provided it is made to our satisfaction, as he owns himself much obliged to us.

London, Jan. 8. Advices from Constantinople assure, that secret councils have been lately held in the Seraglio, and great military preparations making, which some say are against the Persians, and others against the Christians

Jan. 13. There is no intelligence from the Northern powers: But the partizans of the house of Austria have regained fresh spirits, and now again publish, that the plan proposed by the elector of Mentz, for accommodating matters with the elector Palatine, has been approved by every body; and that if Mr. Vorster had sufficient instructions for signing it, it would have been before now actually signed

We hear that several artificers of all trades are to be engaged to go to Nova Scotia, the better to improve that colony, which is in a flourishing way.

The liberty granted by parliament to import raw silk, of the growth of our plantations, duty free, has had such a happy effect, that we are assured the colony of Georgia will supply us next year with 50,000 lb. equal to any brought from Italy. A Puff!

Jan. 15. The foreign Gazettes contain an article from London, importing, that the memorial which Mr. Mitchel, secretary from his Prussian majesty, some time ago delivered to the duke of Newcastle, had been laid before the privy council; and the subject of it being looked upon as a national affair, it was agreed to leave it to the decision of the parliament. In consequence of which, orders had been given to declare to his Prussian majesty, that the king and his council had examined his memorial, and the exposition of his motives, but that as the affair, which they relate to, more immediately concern private property, his majesty with the advice of his council, had resolved to refer the whole to the consideration of his parliament, being persuaded that this wise assembly would decide it with the strictest justice.

There are upwards of thirty sail of ships fitting out in the River for the Greenland fishery for the ensuing season.

Jan 16. Yesterday here was a board of admiralty: The board days are for the future to be on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Four men of war are put already into commission; two at Portsmouth, and two at Plymouth; and several more are expected to be commissi n'd this day

This day at twelve o'clock, the poll begins for a member to represent the city of Westminster in parliament, in the room of Sir Peter Warren, deceas'd, when, 'tis thought, the hon Col. Cornwallis will be elected without opposition.

A PROBLEM.

An ancient gentleman that was newly married to a beautiful young lady, was asked by his friend, the age of himself and wife? or, what was the difference of their age? To which he (to avoid the censure of the company) made this reply.

THE number of our years (viz) I readily can fix,
And am well assur'd is just Seventy six,
And One Tenth of my age, or years of my life,
Is equal unto Three Eighths of my wife:
And having made this declaration,
I leave unto you the investigation.
